(Pall Me Gasette, April 19.) To speak of Hopespierre as a teacher of morale may sound incongruous to these who associate his name with little besides the guillotine and the long procession of victims he sent to death. Many a better man, however, han fuiled to grasp the truth he preached in '93, when churches were robbed and priests imprisoned, as is now the case in Paris. A French paper calls the attention of the authorities of the present excesses to his attenuous of this point "By what right (said he) should men bitherto unknown in the march of revolution come in the midst of these events to seek a false popularity, sowing discord among us, disturbing liberty of worship in the name of liberty, attacking fanaticism by fresh fanatidiam, and making the homage due to pure trach they be permitted thus to play with the dignity of the people, and fasten the bells of fally to the very sceptre of reason? With every respect for excursionists, Quickettvez,..... whose refinement of manners is beyond dispute, we must say that this is going a little too far. Fallen greatness is not a thing to be inspected by flourishing smallness from the top of a van improvised into a grand stand, and greeted with the popping of ginger-heer hot-tles. It would have served these people perfeetly right if they had all been captured, placed in a large cage, and themselves inspected by the ex-Emparor as specimens of British excursionists. To have his footsteps dogged and all bis movements watched by a parcel of inquisitive persons who will not even let him perform his devotions in peace must be extremely painful to one who above all others yearns for rest. His bitterest enemies . will at all events, admit that in the treatment he receives from his admirers "his punishment exceeds his offence." "His Majosty wishes for seclusion," remarked a gentleman the other day to an excursionist at Chiaelburst whose gaudy neckeloth formed a pleasing contrast to his unwashed face. "Seclasion be "replied the excursionist . "Hooray vivo Lumperer !" RIGHER AND CHINESE DICTIONARY. WITH THE PUNTI AND MANDARIN PRONUNCIATION: An Anglo-Chinese Dicrionary, by the Rev. W. LOBSCHEID, published at the Daily Press Office, Hongkong.

TOB scope and practical service this Work stands unrivalled. All the new words ounce RAVINS DUCK, suitable for Boat Sails | which the Chinese have of late years been compelled to coin to express the numerous objects in machinery, photography, telegraphy, and in science generally, which the rapid advance of foreign relations has imposed upon them, are here given in cutomo. - Each and every word is fully illustrated and explained, forming exercises for atudents of a most instructive nature. Both the Court and Punti pronunciations are given, the accents being carefully marked on the best principle hitherto attained. The typography displays the encouse of an attempt to make the Chinese and English type correspond n the size of body, thereby effecting a vast economy of space, achieving a clearness not previously attained, and dispensing with those vast margins and vacant-spaces which have heretofore characterized Chinese publications. THE Proprietor of WING-KEB Shop begg to The soope of the work is so great, and its inform the Public that his Shop has been established since 1855, at Endicott's Long, and utilitarian purposes so complete, that a rethat he has always a great quantity of Best ference to its pages chables a person who COAL in store for Sale. Gentlemen or Ship understands English to communicate effectively masters wishing to patronise him, are requested with natives who understand nothing but Chinese. In this respect the work will be found indispensable to all Europeans residing in China, and to the natives themselves it explains subjects fully, with which very few indred of them are perfectly acquainted. ### Extracts. An Evil of City Life.

(Saturday Review.) In former days the City merchant lived in a counting house. He was at his dock early in against Fire on Buildings and Goods, at cutrent the morning, and was still to be found there rates. till eight or nine o'clock at night. But his hours of business were long because when at business he was also at home. If he was liable to be ogcasionally summoned from the dinnertable to confer with a customer, on the other hand he could often close his books and step upstairs for a gossip with a friend. He was on the spot if anybody wanted him; and whether he sat in his counting-house or in his arm.chair. by the fire in his private parlour mattered little. The most important part of his business would usually be over not long after noon, and then came dinner -a substantial and serious meal. served probably at a common table, where he ant surrounded by his clerks and apprentices. as well as by his family. The afternoon would pass dozily, and towards evening the mercantile community would rouse itself up for a little more work before supper and bedtime. The of its yearly profits, divided pro rate to the not sort of life led by City people of the last premium contributed. generation is exactly that which may be seen at the present day in many towns of Germany and Holland, where a brisk foremoon is followed by an entire cessation of business during the solemn interval of dinner; after which offices and warehouses are again opened till late at night. Though the day's work is | Agents in Hongkong for the above-named blend naturally together, and the transition can always be accommodated to cannal circumstances. No time is lost in travelling, and the pressure is avoided of having to do everything and think of everything within a fixed fraction of the day, and of attempting to carry on a kind of double existence in separate and distant places. Afterwards, when merchants gave Insurances, viz:up living in the City, they retired only to a moderate distance from it, and were still content to adhere to the long hours which left them plenty of time for their work. Practi- ing. cally the hours of business in London have Above 3 mouths ). now come to be from ten to four o'clock. 'A certain description of routine mechanical work ing...... by subordinates is accomplished, no doubt. both earlier and later, but to all intents and purposes the real work of the greatest commerce in the world is compressed within those brief hours. The consequence is that the pace, has to be accelerated, and that the old-fashioned jog-trot has become the headlong gallop of THE QUEEN INSURANCE COMPANY the race-course. Only a very strong, healthy man, with an exceptionally good head and firm. nerves, can bear up against the perpetual strum of such career, and even in his case the effort must be seconded by something equivalent to training, as regards the careful simplicity and Alive I month and not ! regularity of personal habits. not work but worry which wears a man down:

It has come to be a familiar saying that it is Above 3 months and not 1/2 do. But worry, we take it is, only another word for montal effort and anxiety, and this is of course inscrarable in some degree from all serious work of any kind. It may however be increased very much by the minner in which a man applies himself to his labour; and it is impossible to conceive anyone placing himself at a greater dieadvantage in this respect than the ordinary man of business in the City. .. It is positively pitiable to observe the innumbrable artificial and needless worries with which he wilfully and wantonly surrounds himself. In the first place, he usually lives at some distance from town. He has a railway journey of an hour or more before be reaches his office, and if he misees a particular train he is probably doomed to kick his beels at home for another. hour, and waste the most precious period of the day. Anxiety about the train oppresses him art breakfast. He bolts his chop and guips his tea with one eye on the clock and the other on the morning paper, his mind distracted be-tween his wife's gossip and commissions and his own reflections on the possible influence of the telegrams on the state of the days' markets. favourable specific to assist the digestion terms. of a meal thus swallowed. Without endorsing all the alarming conclusions of the since as to the effect of daily railway travelling on bealth, we may assume as unquestionable the tendency of the motion and noise to produce nervous initation and stimulate | viz :-an unwholesome flow of blond to the head. Iv as such, and their contents. There are pleasant letters and unpleasant Godowns, Offices, Shops, &c., and letters, and the most prosperous man is never without a share of the latter, nor is the most callons proof against the disturbing influence of their contents. In the natural course of ! things, while some transactions have been successful, others have turned out, hadly. There are difficult questions to be solved, calculations to be recast, and losses to be recouped, The room in which our man of business is sitting is in-all-probability-a-small, dingy obamber, the darkness of which is rendered visible by the barrowed light of a patent reflector, assisted perhaps by a jet of gas. A great deal has been done of late years to improve the architecture of the City, both in respect of embellishment and sanitary conditions. Not a few of the greathouses have followed the example of the insurance offices and public companies, and established themselves in noble mansions, with marble balls and apacious well-ventilated rooms. But it is no exaggeration to say that the great bulk of the ordinary lusiness of the City is still conducted in gloomy cupboards of the kind we have described. Considering how the morning has been passed, the feverishness and indigestion provoked by the hurried meal and subsequent journey, the anxieties of the post-bag and the exceeding three months. other communications which have been pouring | Above 3 months, and not ] in, and the hygienic conditions under which exceeding six months .... work has to be done in the office, it is scarcely Above are months the full annual rate. surprising that towards poon a certain sinking and depression should be felt, and a keep desire for something that will at once brace and soothe the nerves. Most men are assamed to own even to themselves that the idea of such an inexceptional occasion they may drown their on Goods stored therein. scruples by dashing the spirit with seltzer or soda-water. But sherry is still as innocent in character, as it is incidious in influence. It trades on this good character, and, it must be said, abuses it. One of its chief constituents is always brandy, and too often the cherry of commerce is only brandy-and bad brandy-in disguise. Yet many a man who would shrink from are prepared to grant Policies against Fire to a forenoon draught of brandy and water as from poison, has not the least besitation in quaffing stored thereon. a goblet of sherry containing twice or thrice as much spirit without the qualification of water. Samething may be due to the habitual ignorance and thoughtlessness even of well informed people as to the elements of what they eat and drink, but it is impossible not to suspect that the presence of strong spirit in sherry is not altogether a disagreeable or unknown adulteration, and that there is a tacit collusion on this point between the wine-merchant and | tice, viz:his one tomers. As in the case of feminine tippling, the doctors have also something to anewer for here. " A biscuit and a glass of sherry is a familiar forenoon specific for the deprese sion and want of tone of which gentlemen in the City complain just as often as fine ladies at | Offices and Godowns and their the West End. Sumetimes the advice is to keep, a bottle of claret or book in the office, and take a sip when the faintness is coming on.
